Kennedy Attempts 'Last Ditch' Rail Settlement

NEWS BRIEFS

House Refuses Election Costs

HARRISBURG (AP) — The House voted down Monday a proposal that the state pay one-half the cost of the special congressional election July 30 in the 15th Congressional District.

State Rep. John F. Bonner, D-Carbon, submitted the proposal as a rider to a minor election bill before the House. The rider was voted down, 105-83.

One Republican, Rep. Ralph A. Marsh, Clearfield, voted for it and one Democrat, John Walsh, Allegheny, opposed it. Otherwise, the roll call followed straight party lines, with Republicans in the majority.

State Rep. Jeannette F. Reibman, D-Northampton, said estimates have been made that the special election will cost the four counties $50,000, with her own county paying $25,000. Northampton is the most populous county in the district.

The other three counties are Carbon, Monroe and Pike.

The election is to fill a facancy created by the death of U. S. Rep. Francis E. Walter, dean of the state's Democratic delegation in Congress.

Mitchell Joins John Birchers

NEWBURGH, N.Y. (AP)—City Manager Joseph Mitchell, whose controversial welfare plan attracted national attention, said Monday he is resigning to accept a job with the John Birch Society.

Mitchell said he would submit his resignation to the City Council, effective Oct. 12, in order to assume a post with the ultra-conservative Birch Society involving organizational work on the East Coast.

Mitchell's welfare changes were aimed at relief recipients, some of whom he contended were chiselers, particularly unwed mothers who have more than one child.

He was again swept to national attention early this year when he was indicted on charges of bribery in connection with rezoning in Newburgh.

Mitchell was tried and acquitted by a jury April 23 and returned to his city job, from which he had voluntarily absented himself before and during the trial.

During the trial on charges he had played a part in a $20,000 shakedown, Mitchell maintained his innocence and said he was a victim of persons who objected to his political opinions.

Civil Rights Action Pressed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate and House committees pressed ahead with civil rights legislation Monday in the face of a growing railroad strike threat that might disrupt congressional timetables.

The Senate Commerce Committee announced a full schedule of hearings for the rest of this week and the early part of next week on the administration's public accommodations bill, which would outlaw racial discrimination in stores, restaurants, hotels and other private business places.

Asst. Atty. Gen. Burke Marshall, head of the Justice Department's civil rights division, told Monday's session that "This problem is very urgent."

Marshall said: "The heat, the frequency and the tempo" of demonstrations against racial segregation have stepped up considerably since mid-May.

Transportation Aid Opposed

HARRISBURG (AP) — The Pennsylvania Council of Churches representing 17 Protestant denominations, opposed Monday legislation that would provide state aid for parochial school transportation.

"We believe that the state and federal government should continue to accord freedom to religious bodies to carry on their own schools, but those who establish and provide full support for those schools and not expect to receive subsidies or special privileges from public authorities," the council said in a letter to the House Education Committee.

Two bills before the Education Committee would allow parochial school students to use public school bus transportation.

Stock Market

NEW YORK (AP) — Worry over rail labor troubles which could lead either to a nationwide strike or to government intervention overhung Wall Street Monday and the market took another steep loss.

Volume was 3.29 million compared with 2.92 million shares in the Friday, post-holiday session, the lightest day in half a year.

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 5.79 to 710.66.

Schoonover 'Hostile'

Witness Surprises Shanley Prosecution

SCRANTON — Stroudsburg banker Gerald D. Shanley Jr. went on trial in U. S. District Court here Monday charged with various irregularities in connection with his stewardship as commanding officer of Co. A, 109th Inf., Pennsylvania National Guard in 1959 and 1960.

The 42-year-old Shanley, a former resident of Scranton, is vice president of the First Stroudsburg National Bank. He is no longer with the National Guard. He resides with his family in Stroudsburg.

A jury of six men and six women is hearing testimony with Chief Federal Judge Michael H. Sheridan presiding. Indications are that the case will be completed before the week's end.

Because of the intense heat in the courtroom, particularly during the afternoon hours, one session will be held Tuesday from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.

Former Asst. U. S. Atty. Edwin Michael Kosik of Scranton is defending Shanley.

Asst. U. S. Attorneys Carlon M. O'Malley Jr. and Julius Altman are presenting the government case.

Highlighting Monday's opening testimony was the appearance of former M-Sgt. Robert Schoonover of East Stroudsburg as a government witness. The government pleaded suprise during his testimony and examined Schoonover as a hostile witness.

Expectations are that Vincent Marek Jr. of Tannersville, former first sergeant of Co. A, will be a government witness today.

Nolo Contendre

Marek has entered a nolo contendre plea to a variety of charges involving irregularities involving checks of Co. A, with headquarters in East Stroudsburg. He will be sentenced later.

Schoonover was convicted by a federal jury here in March on charges of using the mails to defraud and uttering two checks made out to National Guardsmen.

Schoonover has appealed his conviction and is free on bail. A date for arguments for a new trial will be set after the testimony is transcribed.

Marek has been dismissed from his $6,000-plus full-time post with Co. A, according to a spokesman for the third infantry brigade, formerly the 109th.

Schoonover has been relieved of his full-time duties with Co. A, but is being carried on the National Guard rolls on an inactive status until his case is fully adjudicated.

Maj. John E. McDonald, executive officer of the 3rd Inf. Brig., attended Monday's proceedings, reportedly on orders from the brigade commander, Col. John A. Remetta.

The government called six witnesses during yesterday's proceedings in its efforts to convict Shanley on charges of forgery, Shanley on charges of aiding and abetting in forgery, uttering, false statements, and using the mails to defraud. The indictment against Shanley is in 12 counts.

Others called to testify in addition to Schoonover were: Maj. Jose R. Noguera, finance officer for the Dept. of the Army at Indiantown Gap. Theodore van Buskerk, Allan C. Miller, Robert E. Cays, and Arthur E. Jumper, whose Co. A checks are involved in the criminal proceedings against Shanley.

Richard L. Rugg Jr., a teacher in the Pocono Mountains schools and a former lieutenant with Co. A, and Charles B. Jenkinson, Sciota, also a Co. A member, were other witnesses.

During cross examination of Maj. Noguera, Atty. Kosik brought out that payroll vouchers, signed by Shanley, Capt. of Co. A, were also certified by Lt. Col. Earl Palmer, regular Army advisor for the 109th.

Mustering Officer

Likewise during the annual summer encampment in 1960 — as involved in the Shanley proceedings — the attendance records were certified by a mustering officer, it was further testified.

Van Buskerk, of East Stroudsburg, testified he did not receive or endorse a check issued in his name and forwarded by mail to Tumersville.

Miller, of Bangor RD 2, also testified he never received or endorsed a check for $42.67 made out in his name and mailed to "in care of R. L. Rugg." Cays, Stroudsburg RD 3, said he never saw or endorsed a draft made out to him.

Jumper, a Cresco resident, testified along the same line as Cays as to one check, but, it has been determined it was his complaint that may have triggered the investigation into Co. A irregularities.

Jumper said he complained when he did not receive a check and went as far as the finance office at Indiantown Gap.

Later, he testified, he complained to Capt. Shanley, who then referred him to First Sergeant Marek, who in turn told him to see the company clerk.

Rugg, a former platoon leader, testified he was asked by Marek to accept a Miller check. After it arrived by mail, Rugg said he took it and placed it on the desk of first sergeant Marek.

Asks For Statement

Atty. Kosik asked to see a statement Rugg gave federal investigators. It was furnished by Atty. O'Malley. It was read by Kosik and Shanley and returned to government counsel without comment.

Jenkinson said he was asked to accept the Jumper check, mailed to his home in connection with a statement of charges involving lost equipment on the part of the National Guardsman.

Asked if he thought what he did was proper, Jenkinson replied: "The way regulations were changing in the Army, nothing surprised me." He said he gave the check to Marek.

Schoonover's call to the witness chair touched off much activity. Atty. Kosik asked for an offer, at sidebar, as to what the witness would testify.

Schoonover proved a difficult witness from the government's standpoint, and Atty. O'Malley pleaded surprise and asked for the right to cross-examine his own witness.

A lengthy sidebar then followed and Atty. O'Malley proceeded to use Schoonover's testimony as elicited from a grand jury last January, a panel which indicted Schoonover and others.

The government's move in pleading surprise came when Schoonover was testifying as to a conversation he had with then Capt. Shanley in the American House, Stroudsburg, at which the commanding officer signed payroll vouchers.

Schoonover said he remembers vaguely the mention of Tannersville addresses, but no details.

Denies Statement

The witness denied he told a grand jury that the conversation with Shanley was in connection with "too many addresses from Tannersville."

Atty. Kosik called on his vast military knowledge — he is a Lt. Col. in the Army reserve and leaves July 25 for two weeks training in Fort Leavenworth Kansas — to take Schoonover over various administration company procedures.

Schoonover, under Kosik's questioning, testified of the platoon sergeant determining who was present for drills, of forwarding this information to the first sergeant for the morning report, and of the first sergeant submitting this report to the commanding officer for signature. He also testified others signed Shanley's name to military documents.

An Army advisor certifies payroll vouchers not by an actual physical check, but from information contained on the morning report, Schoonover testified.

The commanding officer, likewise, is guided by the accuracy of the morning report, the court and jury were told.

Grand Jury Indicts Mayor Of Reading

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Mayor John C. Kubacki of Reading, Pennsylvania's sixth largest city, was indicted by a federal grand jury Monday on charges of extorting $10,500 — perhaps more — from companies selling parking meters.

The grand jury indicted along with him Abraham Minker, about 65, a convicted gambling figure in Reading and elsewhere, who is serving a four-year prison term in the federal penitentiary at Lewisburg, Pa. He began serving his sentence last May.

Kubacki, 51, a one-time Bucknell University football star, is the second public official in Reading indicted this year. Last May, Police Chief Charles S. Wade was indicted on perjury charges.

In Reading, Kubacki told newsmen: "I don't know anything about it. What can I say?"

After he was indicted Wade had much the same comment, and the mayor said at that time he had full confidence in the chief and intended to keep him in office, which he has done.

The indictment accuses Kubacki and Minker of accepting $3,000 from the Koontz Equipment Corp. of Pittsburgh, a distributor of parking meters, in April, 1960, and $7,500 and a clock worth $880 from the Karpark Corp., of Starkville, Miss., in December, 1961.

The two are charged with violating the Hobbs Act, which forbids obstruction of interstate commerce by extortion, and with violating the general federal conspiracy statute and the anti-racketeering travel act.

Kubacki, mayor of Reading, a city of about 100,000 population since 1960, lost out for the Democratic nomination for another term in last May's primary election.

ON THE MARCH DESPITE INJURY—Allison Turaj, 25, left, of Washington, D. C., continues her anti-segregation march through Gwynn Oak Amusement Park in Baltimore, Md., despite a cut over her right eye that required 10 stitches to close. She was struck by a rock thrown by someone in a mob of angry whites. More than 100 white and Negro integrationists were arrested. (AP Wirephoto)

SEARCH FOR PLANE CRASH VICTIMS—Rescue workers and firemen pick through rubble in search for victims at a day camp near Willow Grove, Pa., Naval Station after a jet fighter plowed into a cluster of buildings where picnickers were spending the day. At least seven persons, four of them children, were killed and 17 others injured. (AP Wirephoto)

Pilot Defends His Actions In Willow Grove Disaster

The plane, streaking at an altitude of 300 to 350 feet approaching the Willow Grove Naval Air Station Sunday, plunged in flames onto a nearby picnic ground.

The pilot, 30-year-old Capt. John W. Butler, a Marine Corps reservist from Boiling Springs, Pa., escaped injury when he ejected and tore through the canopy of his cockpit.

Butler, at a news conference, said he would have landed in the same place "even if I had stayed with the plane."

The news conference was called as high-ranking officers started a full scale hearing into the cause of the crash which brought tragedy to a private outing of families and friends.

Butler said he got no response when he tried to level the plane on a routine mission with three other Marine planes.

Butler, accompanied by Lt. Col. Robert Hemstad, accident investigating chief at the Naval Aviation Safety Center, Norfolk, Va., told of the flight, from take-off to crash.

The four planes took off at 3 p.m. on what was described as a ground control intercept mission and continued until reaching 36,000 feet.

That's when trouble developed, Butler said. His aircraft developed electrical trouble, with the radio and various instruments failing. He was able to give hand signals to his section leader in another plane, but he couldn't reach ground control, he said.

He took his plane down to less than 20,000 feet so that a fuel boost pump could operate without bursting into flames. Butler signaled the ground tower on the runway to flash acknowledging red or green lights to see whether his landing gear worked properly.

"They gave me the go-ahead to land," Butler said.

Upon reaching a straightaway position, the craft started to nose dive. Butler said there was no response when he tried to take the plane to a higher altitude.

"I saw trees coming up—and ejected," Butler related. "I couldn't do anything about it at all. I am satisfied that it was the only thing to do."

He said he had no real problems with the same craft an FJ-4 fighter plane, before.

A veteran of jet flying since 1955, Butler wasn't ready to say whether he'd fly again. "I'll have to wait and see how I feel later," he said.

Hemstad said the cause of the crash has not been resolved by a board of inquiry. It could have been a faulty electrical or hydraulic system, he said. He said his board would take remaining parts of the plane to a laboratory and dismantle them for study.

U. S. Freezes Cuban Funds, Transactions

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government Monday froze Cuban assets in this country — whether owned by the Fidel Castro government or Cuban individuals — and banned Americans from unlicensed transactions with Cuba.

The State Department said that "thus Cuba will be denied the use of American facilities for transfers of funds to Latin America for subversive purposes."

The freeze order generally puts Red-dominated Cuba in the same class with Communist China and North Korea. The rules applying to the Soviet bloc are less stringent.

The controls will:

1. Block all assets in the United States of Cuba or of persons in Cuba.

2. Prohibit persons subject to the jurisdiction of the United States from engaging in unlicensed transfers of U.S. dollars to or from Cuba.

3. Prohibit all other unlicensed transactions with Cuba or Cuban nationals involving property in which there is a Cuban interest.

Any American citizen or alien residing in the United States violating the new regulations would face a prison term up to 10 years and a $10,000 fine.

The measures instituted Monday have a special provision exempting Cuban refugees in the United States or elsewhere in the non-Communist world unless they are acting on behalf of the Cuban regime.

The measures provide also that, when serious hardship can be proven, remittances by persons residing in the United States to members of their immediate family residing in Cuba will be authorized by special license.

U.S. officials said Monday's order would virtually paralyze the transfer of Cuban funds in the form of dollars throughout the sphere. The dollar is the main form of currency recognized by all Western hemisphere nations for international fund transfers.

The United States acted following adoption of a resolution Wednesday by the Council of the Organization of American States urging, among other things, that the hemisphere's governments keep a close watch on funds used by the Castro government for Communist subversion.

Calls Conference For Early Today

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy took charge of the stalled railroad work rules talks anew Monday by summoning both sides to the White House Tuesday to search for ways to prevent a strike.

Pierre Salinger, White House press secretary, announced the 10:30 a.m. EDT meeting as an "obviously," last-ditch effort. He noted that it will come less than 48 hour before the deadline of 12:01 a.m. Thursday set by the railroads for putting into effect work rules which the unions say will force them to strike.

The President moved quickly after the problem was turned over to him by Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz at a White House briefing attended by Democratic congressional leaders. Kennedy has said that if bargaining fails he will ask Congress to arm him with authority to force a settlement.

Wirtz summarized for Kennedy the futile efforts made by his department since June 17 to get the railroads and five operating unions to carve out an agreement. At the heart of the dispute is the carriers' attempts — sanctioned by the Supreme Court—to eliminate gradually what they call "featherbedding," or unnecessary jobs.

Kennedy had won agreement June 15 by both sides to try for settlement by July 10. This delayed a strike threat after he had exhausted all other presidential authority to prevent a walkout.

Salinger Refuses Comment

Salinger would not comment on whether the railroads and the unions would be asked again to postpone any action that might bring a strike and try further for agreement or wait until Congress acts. If Kennedy does seek new congressional authority, there was no hope raised that any legislation could be passed in time to prevent a strike if the Thursday deadline holds.

The most hopeful note came from Sen. A. S. Mike Monroney, D-Okla., who said "we can move pretty darn fast" on Capitol Hill to meet an emergency. But even he conceded it would take the Senate about a week to complete hearings on legislation.

Kennedy will meet with J. E. Wolfe, chief negotiator for the railroads, and three other industry representatives along with Presidents of the five unions. Salinger said he would "reserve comment" on anything the President would have to say to them. But he has said a strike tying up the nation's railroads would be intolerable.

Post Office Prepares

In anticipation of a possible strike, Postmaster General J. Edward Day said Monday night first class mail and air mail would continue but all other mail will be restricted.

He said second, third and fourth class mail and parcels would go no farther than 150 miles from the post office of origin.

He said parcel post—or fourth class—shippings should use first class mail for any emergency and that perishable goods shipments should be halted immediately.

Members of Congress, for the most part, kept silent about the dispute, saying it would be discreet first to see what Kennedy wants them to do.

Wirtz has mentioned in the past week the possibility of compulsory arbitration, government seizure of the railroads or a combination of both.

Time A Key Factor

The time element is a key factor in Kennedy's decision-making process. The railroads have announced they will put into effect at 12:01 a.m. Thursday work rules which the Supreme Court has held they have the right to impose. The unions say this will mean a strike.

Chairman Oren Harris, D-Ark. of the House Commerce Committee, one of those who attended the White House session, said he can see little hope that a strike can be averted. If Kennedy requests legislation, he said, there is small chance of Congress passing it before the strike deadline.

A similar view was expressed by Sen. Gordon Allott, R-Colo., who told reporters "I couldn't imagine any bill getting through this Congress in less than 45 days unless it was a declaration of war." Perhaps it might be accomplished in 30 days, if there was a strike, he added.

The White House briefing by Wirtz was attended by Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, the assistant Senate Democratic leader, and ranking Democratic members of the congressional Labor and Commerce committee. Also present was Assist. Secretary of Labor James J. Reynolds, who has played the government's key role in the negotiations.

After the session, Pierre Salinger, White House press secretary, said he could not comment on any possible steps the administration is contemplating.

Further Discussion

He said Kennedy plans to discuss the problem further at Tuesday's weekly breakfast meeting with Senate and House Democratic leaders.

Sen. Warren G. Magnuson, D-Wash., chairman of the Senate Commerce Committee, said no legislation was proposed at the White House, that it was just a meeting to "brief us and bring us up to date on the situation."

Magnuson said the administration still is waiting to see what happens.

Informed congressional sources said that if any legislation is sought it will be tailored to deal specifically with the current railroad crisis and with that only.

Sources on Capitol Hill said consideration is being given, among other things, to a combination measure providing for seizure of the railroads and compulsory arbitration.

The railroad brotherhoods Sunday turned down a government settlement formula because they said it involved compulsory bargaining. They vowed to fight any attempt at passage of legislation which might impose such a provision. The railroads, however, accepted the government proposal.

At the convention of Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, AFL-CIO in St. Louis Monday, the union's president, H. E. Gilbert urged the federal government to "Turn us loose." Then he said, the work rules dispute could be settled in less than 24 hours.

Gilbert blamed the deadlock on what he called the "smug assumption" by the railroads that the federal government would not permit railroad employes to strike.

The threatened strike would hit virtually all the nation's railroads, which have about 700,000 employes and 217,000 miles of right-of-way. A strike could result in near chaos for commuters in many cities, a railroad spokesman said.

Scranton Credits Deficit Cut To Austerity

HARRISBURG (AP) — Gov. Scranton said Monday the state ended the 1962-63 fiscal year with a deficit of $14.5 million—some $7 million less than he forecast earlier in the year.

Report of the spending and revenue figures for the year ended July 1 gave the House appropriations committee information it needed before it would clear the administration's general 1963-64 spending program for floor action.

The committee had been holding up the bulk of the governor's budget for the new fiscal year pending the final accounting for the fiscal period just ended.

The governor said the deficit was reduced from the earlier forecasts through the administration's "strict economy program."

"Because of our economy program, every department under the jurisdiction of the governor has spent less money than was appropriated for it," Scranton said.

But Democrats immediately contended the deficit would have been even less, except for additional spending plans backed by Scranton.

Said David R. Baldwin, deputy state treasurer and budget secretary under the administration of Democratic Gov. David L. Lawrence:

"It is interesting to note that if the $4 million which had been put in the Korean conflict sinking fund last August had been used to make payments due this March—as we had implored the current administration to do—the deficit would have been reduced to $10.5 million.

"Moreover, if the unnecessary additional appropriation of cash to the Pennsylvania Industrial Development Authority—if only an authorization to commit the money had been given—this would have reduced the deficit to $6.5 million."

The $4 million in additional PIDA funds was approved by the legislature and signed into law by the governor several months ago.

The deficit occurred mainly because revenue collections fell behind estimates. Collections were $24.4 million behind estimates. Reduced spending trimmed the margin between expenditures and receipts to the level reported Monday by the governor.

The bulk of the revenue shortage of $24.4 million came in corporation tax collections where the monies were $15.6 million below the estimate of $157 million, the fiscal report showed.

Sales and use tax receipts for the year totaled $401.4 million, some $4 million short of the estimate.

Malt beverage tax collections for the year were off $2.3 million while the realty transfer tax fell $1.6 million below the estimate.

Insurance premiums were $1.5 million off the estimate while bank shares were off by $3.2 million.

The capital stock and franchise tax brought in some $3.6 million more than anticipated.

In his statement, Scranton pledged to continue his austerity program in the new fiscal year which began July 1.

State News Roundup

Harness Taxes Near $Million

HARRISBURG (AP) — The State Revenue Department reported Monday that the last 33 days of pari-mutuel harness racing in Pennsylvania produced $691,962 in taxes.

In 26 days of racing at Liberty Bell track in Philadelphia, state taxes totaled $479,042. The Meadows track in Washington County produced $63,888 in eight days of racing.

Total wagering at both tracks has been $14,657,000.

Mental Health Study Planned

HARRISBURG (AP) — The Pennsylvania Department of Public Welfare plans to launch a two-year project to develop a comprehensive study of mental health treatment in the Commonwealth.

The project, announced Saturday by state Welfare Secretary Arlin M. Adams, will be financed by a $300,000 federal grant.

Gov. Scranton will name a mental health advisory planning committee, composed of representatives of governmental, professional, religious and civic organizations.

Adams said the study would concentrate on these goals:

—Development of an integrated system of community-based mental health facilities and programs, with special emphasis on community mental health centers.

—Modification of state mental institutions in keeping with the changing role possible for them with advances in treatment and the development of community facilities and programs.

—Detailing of special programs in prevention of mental illness.

—Clarification and coordination of the roles of governmental and non-governmental agencies in the fight against mental illness and retardation.

"This project will be an all-inclusive assessment and evaluation of the mental health need of Pennsylvania," Adams stated.

"With the development of this 'master plan' we will have a complete blueprint for a comprehensive approach to mental illness—one of the major health problems of our times."

Pneumonia Takes Siamese Twin

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pneumonia on Monday claimed the life of Rose Mary Temoshenko, who was the surviving Siamese twin separated from her sister in an operation 19 days ago.

The sister, Ruth Ann, died June 26 of an infection.

They were at Children's Hospital in Pittsburgh, where they were taken after birth June 7.

Daughters of Mr. and Mrs. John Temoshenko of nearby Tarentum, R.D. 3, they were joined at the abdomen and shared one organ, the liver.

Two teams of doctors deparated the girls — dividing the liver between them — in a four-hour operation. At first doctors reported there was hope both would live.

Dr. William B. Kiesewetter, head surgeon at Children's, said the operation itself was a medical rarity. He said Siamese twins joined like this had been successfully separated fewer than five times.

The total number of successful Siamese twin separations is less than 40, he said.

Driver Ban Plan To Be Renewed

HARRISBURG (AP) — Pennsylvania's reciprocity agreement with New Jersey for suspension of drivers' licenses in traffic violations will be renegotiated within the next month.

"We've revised our suspension schedule this month, and I understand New Jersey has made some changes," Harry H. Brameld, Pennsylvania traffic safety commissioner, said yesterday.

"The problem, if any exists, will be to work out penalties for violations where the suspension schedules of the two states differ."

Morse Denounces GOP Patronage

HARRISBURG (AP) — Democratic state chairman Otis B. Morse says the Scranton administration is beginning to inflict political patronage into Pennsylvania's mental health program.

"Non-political sources are reporting to us that Republican County chairmen are pushing their way into the offices of the superintendents of our mental hospitals to demand the hiring of competent personnel and the immediate hiring of Republican party hacks," Morse declared in a statement issued yesterday.

He said he had received reports of specific incidents of political intervention from Allentown, Clarks Summit and Retreat State Hospitals.

The report also showed that there are 68 children in protective homes and that four family counselings and four post placement counselings were held during the month.

Space Provided

The commissioners discussed several questions from members of election boards in the county. One question asked was, "Is there space provided on the permanent voting record cards which are used by the election boards in the county?"

A study of the records showed that there is space provided for special elections and that the space should be used to record the number of the voter ballot when he votes at the special election on July 30.

Full contents of the letter, obtained by the Daily Record, follow:

July 3, 1963

Gentlemen:

Please be advised effective immediately of my resignation to the borough of Stroudsburg.

a. Poor working conditions. (Unbiased schedule changes).

b. Personal feelings of chief and undersigned.

c. Favoritism shown within the department.

d. Friction between men within the department.

Yours truly,

Borough officials declined to release the letter of resignation last Friday, arguing that it should be presented to the full council first at its next meeting July 17.

Heberling was suspended without pay June 17 by Mayor Joseph H. Small, after a conference attended by Heberling, Police Chief John B. Tretheway and Asst. Chief John H. Baujan.

Criticized By Mayor

Small said Heberling did not answer an emergency red light for 32 minutes on the night of June 6. Small also criticized Heberling's attitude toward other patrolmen.

Heberling would not say where he was during the period from 6:18 to 6:50 p.m. on June 6 when emergency red lights mounted over borough traffic signals were on.

Rooney Joins GOP On Bar Politicos Vote

HARRISBURG -- State Senator Fred B. Rooney, Democratic candidate for the 15th Congressional seat in the July 30 special election, yesterday crossed party lines to join Republicans in voting to bar politicians from holding stock in Pennsylvania harness racing tracks.

Rooney issued the following statement:

"It seems imperative to me that every possible implication of political influence be removed from harness racing in our state.

"We cannot run the risk that racing will become a political football used for the eventual financial gain of either political party, or its members.

In Best Interest

"For this reason, I feel that Senate Bill 79 is in the best interest of all Pennsylvania citizens as well as the people of my own district."

Final passage of the bill came on a vote of 29 to 17.

Heavy pressure was put on Democratic senators by politicians with harness racing interests in the Philadelphia area to vote against the bill.

Rooney represents Northampton County in the state senate.

Crowe Named To Bartlett Unit

BETHLEHEM — Montgomery F. Crowe of Stroudsburg has been named to the Bartlett to Congress Committee, representing all sections of Carbon, Monroe, Pike, and Northampton Counties, the committee chairman announced yesterday.

The chairman is Vincent J. "Pat" Pazzetti, Jr., 73, retired manager of Bethlehem Steel plant in Bethlehem, and former All-American football player for Lehigh University in 1912.

Besides Crowe, those newly named to the committee are Mrs. Frances Chase of Palmer Township, Mrs. F. F. Couch of Bethlehem, Mrs. William J. Dauth of Easton, Frances W. Goodwin of Bethlehem, Dr. George Greenwood of Bethlehem, Prof. Leon J. McGeady of Lafayette College and Dr. James Whildin of Bethlehem.

Pazzetti explained the additional members will supplement those already named to the Bartlett Committee and "demonstrate the tremendous enthusiasm engendered by our candidate in all four counties."

Pazzetti stressed that committee members are cooperating with and are supplemented by numerous citizens organizations now forming "Neighbors for Bartlett" clubs throughout the district.

"These clubs," Pazzetti said, "are spontaneous organizations prompted by our candidate and by the earnest desire of these people (The committee members) for responsible representation in Washington."

"Yeoman Work"

The various city committees also came under comment by Pazzetti who said "They are all doing yeoman work in this campaign and, as any student of politics knows, it is the volunteer workers who spell the difference in a campaign of this type."

Pazzetti noted that national publicity has already been focused upon the 15th Congressional District race, citing a number of national publications which have devoted space to coverage of this election. "This election," he said, "will be considered as a barometer in determining the popularity of the Kennedy Administration."

"In two other tests this year the Administration has taken some pretty hard knocks," he said. This was in reference to Congressional races in two California districts where Republicans piled up impressive victories in predominately Democrat districts.

Rt. 80 Section Traffic Rerouted

STROUDSBURG The southbound lane of the ramp at the intersection of Rt. 80 and Rt. 611 two miles north of Stroudsburg will be closed only until about July 20, William Winkler, regional district 5 highways officer said yesterday in Stroudsburg.

Winkler said barricades were put up yesterday at 11:30 a.m. and that traffic flow which was routed down Rt. 611 to Stroudsburg was "very heavy around noon."

The southbound lane is barricaded to permit removing of the ramp so a section of Rt. 80 can be hooked into the completed section at the ramp. The new section stretches four miles to Bartonsville.

When the tie-up is completed, the southbound lane of Rt. 80 from Scotrun to the New Jersey border, with a portion running through Stroudsburg, will be open to the public.

To Close Two Days

The northbound lane of the ramp which brings traffic from Rt. 80 onto 611 will then be closed at the very end of the construction deadline and remain closed for two days. Traffic will be rerouted at the Main St. Interchange of Rt. 80, Winkler said.

After the northbound lane is hooked up with the new section, traffic will be able to travel from New Jersey to Scotrun without interruption.

Last Paving Today

The plan is supposed to be completed sometime in August. Winkler said, and he added that "the section work to Bartonsville is going great guns from what I can see. The last 1600-foot paving job will be done Tuesday (today), and all that will be left is the installation of guard rails and paved shoulders."

Winkler said that he doesn't expect traffic to get tied up in being rerouted through Stroudsburg. The southbound lane will be closed for only 12 days and the northbound lane for two days.

Supervisors Sent Letters On Planning

STROUDSBURG — Atty. Alex Bensinger, president of the Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce, who is acting to set up a County Planning Commission, has issued a letter to all Monroe township boards of supervisors.

The full text of the letter follows:

You will recall on past occasions the Pocono Mountains Chamber of Commerce has been interested in promoting the idea of community planning so as to anticipate land use problems that are certain to arise in our fast changing Monroe County. We believe that our direct knowledge of the subject, that the residents of the County will be best served by making active a County Planning Commission cooperating with Township and Borough planning and zoning commissions in carrying this forward.

In the past we have attempted to develop educational programs as to the need for community planning. We should like to offer to you again, the opportunity of learning more about this complex and sometimes controversial subject.

We want to make known to you our endorsement for community planning and to ask if there is anything we can do to assist the township supervisors along these lines. Specifically, we can offer speakers at your gatherings or at an oficial meeting and supply general information, or the source of the information.

We would very much like to hear from each supervisor as to the feeling in his respective community and as to his own personal views regarding community planning.

Hits Scranton Administration

Rooney Blasts Disabled Vet's Firing

EASTON — State Sen. Fred B. Rooney charged last night that the firing of a disabled veteran of World War II and the Korean conflict from the Lehighton Highway Dept. shed is typical of the "callous, desperate attempts of the Scranton administration to pad the payroll with Republican workers, who will be at the polls instead of on the job on July 30."

Rooney identified the veteran as Joseph A. Horvath of 320 W. Patterson St., Lansford.

Horvath lost his right eye at Inchon in South Korea during the Korean War.

Seen "Ridiculous"

Rooney called the firing "one of the most ridiculous and inhuman moves yet made by an administration which piously pretends to be concerned with getting good workers; then fires them wholesale simply because their politics do not suit the emergency needs of a special election."

In contrast to the Republican action, Rooney said, the Democrats kept a disabled Republican worker (Paul Wentz, who lost an arm in a civilian highway accident) on the job at the Lehighton shed during the entire eight years of the Leader and Lawrence administrations.

Rooney told members of the Wilson Borough and Easton City Democratic Committees in two separate meetings last night that Scranton's action is a "complete sellout from his campaign promise that he would never fire workers on a wholesale basis, simply because they were Democrats."

At his home in Lansford, Horvath said last night that "the only reason anyone gave me for being fired was the fact that I am a Democrat. There is no other reason," he said.

"Political Trick"

"It should be clear now, that Scranton and the Republicans in the 15th Congressional District will use every cheap political trick in the book to try to grease the skids for the election of their candidate," Rooney said.

"That includes the summary dismissal of a disabled veteran with three children, as well as the absolutely needless scheduling of a special election on July 30. The election should have been held in conjunction with the regular election in the fall," Rooney said.

Horvath's three children are nine, seven and two and a half. He had been employed for eight years as one of the janitors at the Lehighton State Garage. He was fired by a letter over the signature of Carbon County Highways Superintendent Michael Thear, effective at midnight, June 14.

A complaint against the firing has been lodged with Scranton's office by the VFW post in Tamaqua.

Railroad Union Suicide

Rejection by the railroad unions of a government plan to resume negotiations on elimination of 40,000 firemen's jobs through attrition is the last in a series of suicidal actions they have taken.

They have rejected the Supreme Court decision which upheld the railroad management's right to eliminate unnecessary jobs — called "featherbedding."

They have rejected recommendations for settlement made by two presidential emergency boards and by Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz. And now they have rejected Wirtz's latest proposal for attrition rather than elimination of the 40,000 jobs the railroads say are not needed.

They have threatened a nation-wide strike Thursday at 12:01 a.m. if the railroads start eliminating the 40,000 jobs at that time.

Their latest move has subjected the railroad unions and indirectly all unions to legislation by Congress which will prevent a walkout endangering the nation's economy. They opposed "compulsory arbitration" but are headed for compulsory legislation.

If the railroad unions are unwilling to give some ground on an issue where all the cards are stacked against them and all government agencies disagree with them, they must be prepared to suffer the consequences of their suicide.

They will probably lose the 40,000 jobs eventually anyway. And they will lose another little bit of private collective bargaining freedom to the federal government.

Eating Outdoors

The Stroudsburg Board of Health and its health officer are using the borough's public eating and drinking ordinance to forbid serving food on the terrace of the Penn-Stroud Hotel.

Article IV, section 4 of the ordinance does state that:

"All doors, windows and other openings of any public eating or drinking place, food or food products establishment, shall be provided with screens or netting so constructed and maintained so as to prevent the ingress of flies, other insects and animals."

The action which closed the Penn-Stroud Main St. terrace came after food and drinks had been served for two years without creating a health danger or nuisance. The reasons for the sudden discovery of health ordinance infraction are not entirely clear, but it is clear that such outdoor food service is prohibited by the letter of the law.

We are sure that the spirit of the law is protection of the public health and not prohibition of food service in a clean and pleasant place. The health officer is following the letter of the law and should not be asked to make special exceptions for special cases.

The best solution for the board of health, the borough council and places like the Penn-Stroud appears to be amendment of the ordinance as it now stands.

Since the health board and the health officer are best informed about the borough's health problems, perhaps they should sit down with the council and work out an amendment. The responsibility for change rests with the council.

The purpose of health laws should not be unnecessary restriction of healthy activities. The present law is unnecessarily rigid. A minor change would make Stroudsburg a nicer place to visit and to live in.

The Pennsylvania Story

Watered School Bill

By Mason Denison

Harrisburg — A piddling school district reorganization bill that all but wipes out the mandatory reorganization program laid down by the 1961 session's Act 561 this week makes its debut in the House of Representatives -- to become the hallmark of the Scranton Administration on the education front.

Still bearing the ripped and shredded flag of a Scranton Administration bill, the measure that has been talked and written to death several times over is scheduled to come up for committee action and possible report-out in the lower chamber today.

The salient fact stands out that little is left of the original measure that in emasculated form twitched through the Senate last week on a strict party-line vote — 27 Republicans for, and 23 Democrats against.

The salient fact stands out too that virtually nothing remains of old Act 561 -- to all practical intents and purposes -- the bill originally drawn up on the basis of recommendations of the then loudly-touted Governor's Committee on Education during the Democratic Lawrence regime.

Old Act 561 was the bellringer at least on "something new" in the field of education in Pennsylvania -- legislation conceived as a result of exhaustive and intensive study by the then specially appointed Governor's Committee of top educators and laymen.

Even Act 561, tough and strict as it was in its final form did not embody many of the hard-headed recommendations of the Committee which had looked at the education problem facing the Keystone State with a cold, unjaundiced eye on the facts and future needs front.

It proved to be too much of a politician's nightmare.

Perhaps no single piece of legislation has ever gained the fanfare and pizzaz accorded the school district reorganization act of 1961, that never even got off the ground for anything approaching a full-blooded start — before being literally scratched off the statute books!

The inescapable fact is that Act 561 will go down as a "Democratic measure" simply because it was enacted during a Democratic (Lawrence) Administration while the present education bogey bill will go down as a "Republican measure" on the record books.

Nothing other than time will ever tell the tale as to which piece of legislation can ever be classified as the "best".

Curiously though, Act 561, while having the Democratic label, actually wasn't a Democratic piece in the true sense. It was simply the embodiment of recommendations of a non-partisan committee that "happened" to be appointed by a Democratic chief executive.

The recommendations were not those of the Democratic Governor -- they were simply endorsed by him.

On the other hand and quite in contrast, what started out as the Scranton Administration's "bill of revision" insofar as Act 561 is concerned was not the work of any committee, per se, but strictly the single expression of one person, Governor Scranton himself.

The bill now before the House is not however, the full measure originally envisioned by the Governor but nevertheless still bears his personal (although somewhat qualified) seal of approval and still carries the Administration's (shredded) flag.

If the present bill becomes law (and indications are that it will) the new act can indeed be specifically referred to as the "Scranton School Act" inasmuch as it has been conceived exclusively by the Scranton Administration.

On the other hand, Act 561 never has and could not conceivably be referred to as the "Lawrence School Act" for the simple reason that neither Mr. Lawrence nor his Administration "conceived" it.

It is a strategic difference worth bearing in mind as the present legislation moves down the homestretch.

Off The Record

—By BOB CLARK

We picked up the sport pages the other day and saw where Warren Spahn, the Milwaukee Braves lefthander, went 16 innings in a game before bowing 1-0 to the San Francisco Giants. Now 16 frames on the hill isn't much but when you are 42 years old it is cause for a fan to take notice.

We wondered in amazement how Spahn does it. Last week our four kids decided "daddy" had to show his age. And the 42-year-old holiday seeker did.

Shelley was the first to prove that Clark isn't a Warren Spahn. The second eldest sought to find out how much "wind" her old man had. A contest under water gave the answer.

Shell or "Shorty" submerged with her father, each holding their breaths against time. It seemed to "pop" that we were down at least five minutes before the elder one decided air was more valuable above than below.

With bulging eyes and lungs screaming for a long pull for a second breath, we came up knowing for sure we were the winner. But like always father doesn't know best. Shelley was still below, acting like she was inside the Nautilus. Finally we conceded defeat and pulled the seven-year-old lass up.

Of course, she was surprised that dad couldn't stand the pressure and needed three days to recoup the air lost in only a minute.

Seeing how easily Shelley was a victor over the 42-year-old, Jocelyn and Erin, two more brave daughters, aimed to get in the act. Each outwinded pop in a doubleheader. Before it was over Rob who we think is 14 months old could have made it four straight triumphs over the man who thought life begins at 40.

All this occurred early during our vacation. Needless to say it was nice sucking in air the remainder.

Moral of Story: Don't believe that phrase "if you don't succeed try, try again." Also there is only one Warren Spahn.

Unanswered Questions

Washington — The lovely and vivacious Lee Udall, wife of Interior Secretary Stewart L. Udall, was keynote speaker at the National Convention of the Future Homemakers of America today (Monday). I can never be a future homemaker—not with my past—But I would sure like to know the answers to some of the questions Mrs. Udall placed before the futuristic assemblage.

I was especially intrigued because I thought all the words in the Udall family belonged to the Secretary. Every time I ever asked Mrs. Udall anything more searching than "How do you do?" She always replied, "You'll have to ask Stu about that."

But she entered herself in this futurity event and confided to the 1,500 future homemakers that she used to be headstrong. This put her out of my class because at no time was I ever strong in the head. Then she revealed that over the period of a year she wrote down some of the most perplexing questions put to her by her six-year-old son, Dennis, as she went about her past, present, but not yet future, homemaking.

Mrs. Udall listed young Dennis' more baffling queries as:

"Why didn't God make all people rich?"

"What does 'people are born equal' mean?"

"Are teachers more important than mothers?"

"Who is more important—President Kennedy or Mona Lisa?"

Disappointingly to me and I presume to the future homemakers—Mrs. Udall apparently had no answers, either for them or her offspring. She may go her way from the homemakers futurity in Kansas City, happy and carefree as a lark, but she left me to brood.

These questions that young Dennis put to her, and which she disposed of merely by repeating them, are going to keep nagging at me. She has condemned me to a future so torn that if I make a future home it will be for manic-depressives.

I expect that I will never cease moping over the question, "Why didn't God make all people rich?" Any time I suspect others of solvency I will go into black dejection. It isn't that I'm envious, you understand. I just wish it was me that was rich, not them.

I don't know that I care so much about not being born equal. But I don't know why I couldn't have stayed that way. I tried to earn myself inequality. I think it's on an American plot to keep me one of the crowd.

"Are teachers more important than mothers?" What malefic cent devil could get into a six-year-old boy to make him ask his mother a thing like that? An ordinarily aware lad should know which is most important. Does he have to hold up fingers, or in the other calisthenic signs, in order to withdraw from the presence of his mother?

The chances are I may never cease feeling over who is more important, President Kennedy or Mona Lisa. I wouldn't be surprised if some mischievous hence me to the answer. I more-vel, however, that the wife of a cabinet officer, beholden for her daily bread to President Kennedy, didn't try to fake some kind of reply that would have gotten young Dennis off the subject.

"Who is more important—President Kennedy or Mona Lisa?" As I sit here drooping, the faintest glimmer of an answer seems to be filtering through.

How's this for an answer to throw in the teeth of Master Dennis Udall:

"The Mona Lisa was allowed back in France, but President Kennedy wasn't."

The Defense Department has standardized everything from the TFX to bloomers, butcher smocks and belt buckles, but it now has to wrestle with a new problem in unstandardization.

Assistant Secretary of the Navy Kenneth E. Belieu (a retired Army Colonel) believe it or not) reveals that the sea service is sorely upset because it has just been furnished Army mattresses.

For reasons which challenge the imagination, Navy mattresses are six inches wider than Army mattresses.

A few inspired book dedications:

Inez McKeown dedicated her "So This Is Ranching" to "My infant grandson, the only gent on whom I've been able to pin anything."

Mark Hellinger dedicated one of his volumes to the bargain basement of a department store, for designing "underwear that doesn't bind while seated at a typewriter."

Franklin P. Adams inscribed one volume of verse to his "Loving Wife, but for whose constant interruptions, this book would have been finished six months earlier."

You may take with a grain of salt the claim of a St. Paul barber that he has a solution for customers who are losing their hair. He sells them a new tonic containing alum and lemon. He warns them that this doesn't grow hair—but it does shrink their heads, so that the hair they have left fits better!

"There's no limit to the amount of work a man can do," insisted Robert Benchley, "provided, of course, that it isn't the work he's SUPPOSED to be doing at that moment."

A college class was assigned the task of writing a short, short story with an unexpected ending. One ingenious student came up with the following:

"Marry me," he begged.

"Not on your life," she replied.

And they lived happily ever after.

Poet's Corner

MARIANNE

I see your pleasant face
In every fleeting hour;
Your love is soothing
Like a drifting cloud;
A love profound and true,
Assuring we will, too,
Be linked together
In a winding shroud.

I see your winning smile
In every glowing flower,
And memories come alive
In things you do;
That memory of a day,
Engraved with keepsakes gay,
When we together heard,
"I do."—"I do."

I see your youthful charm
In every morning sun,
A charm romantic,
Stirring girl and boy;
I pray our romance strong
Will ever linger on,
Till we together share
Eternal joy.

The Allen-Scott Report

Deals With Reds

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington — President Kennedy is dangling tempting trade bait before Premier Khrushchev in an effort to "arrange for a period of relative tranquility between Rusia and the U.S."

"Increased trade and economic contacts" are being offered the Soviet ruler in exchange for an easing of the cold war and an agreement to ban nuclear weapons tests in the atmosphere and underwater.

This new extraordinary diplomatic maneuver was broached in one of the President's increasingly frequent letters to Khrushchev. The correspondence between them is one of the most unique, little-known and far-reaching aspects of the President's foreign policy.

This profoundly important new type of summitry, first revealed by this column last February, now involves an exchange of over 30 letters, all dealing with U.S.-Soviet relations.

In the trade proffer, the President pointed out that the easing of tensions could clear the way for him to authorize the sale of many products now barred from sale to Russia.

While no specific items were cited by the President, he has significantly empowered Agriculture Secretary Orville Freeman to discuss the sale of large quantities of surplus fram commodities should Khrushchev indicate interest in the President's plan.

Freeman is leaving this week for a month's tour of the Soviet and satellite countries.

Opening The Gate—To demonstrate that he is serious about increasing trade with Russia, the President has directed the Commerce Department to speed up the issuance of export licenses to shippers with orders from the Reds.

There has been no public announcement of this action.

In one controversial case, the White-House ordered approval of a license for the export 25,000 tons of highly processed petroleum coke.

This exceptionally critical material, of utmost importance in atomic reactors, was the first shipped to Russia since the embargo on strategic goods was imposed at the outbreak of the Korean war.

The new relaxed trade policy of the President is clearly spelled out in a backstage memorandum titled "Economic Policy Toward Russia and the Communist Bloc."

Circulated among the top administration policy-makers, it states:

"U.S. economic policy toward Russia and the Soviet bloc in Europe should be a function of the general policy to attract those countries into a closer association with a strong free-world community. The U.S. should, so far as is practicable, encourage expanded economic trade and contacts between the U.S. and Russia, and constructive Rusian-Soviet bloc participation in international economic organizations."

Ironically, the President's trade lure to the Kremlin comes at a time when the Common Market is considering momentous overtures of its own to Moscow and the Soviet bloc.

During the President's European trip, he learned that the six Common Market members, with West Germany taking the lead, are preparing to cut tariffs on a number of imports from the Iron Curtain.

West German businessmen are particularly active in the move. Members of the President's party were told the aim is to boost Soviet bloc trade from $2.5 billion a year to over $4 billion by the end of 1964.

Looking Forward—In addition to endeavoring to negotiate an informal detente with Russia, the President's closely-guarded exchange of letters with Khrushchev is designed to lay the ground for a summit meeting in the fall. Other objectives, as listed in a top-level policy paper are to (1) "Convey to Moscow a clearer understanding of our intentions . . . so as to avoid or minimize future crises promoted or exploited by the Soviet Union; (2) work out over the longer run tacit understandings with the Soviet as to the ground rules governing our competition throughout the world; and (3) close out any crises as quickly as possible . . ." . . . Secretary Dean Rusk will be a surprise witness for President Kennedy's civil rights program. He will testify before the Senate Commerce Committee on the "impact racial difficulties are having on U.S. foreign policy abroad." Rusk will relate some of the talks he had with European leaders during the President's recent trip.

UN Secretary General U Thant is sending Dr. Ralph Bunche, his American deputy to Moscow for impending nuclear test ban negotiations. Bunche, will act as an observer unless invited to sit in on the talks—which is unlikely . . . On orders from the White House, Secretary Rusk is setting up a new position in the State Department with the designation "Special Assistant for Minority Affairs." The purpose is to advise U.S. diplomats on how to discuss "racial problems" with foreign officials.

Speaking Of Your Health:

I Think I've Got Ptomaine

Have you ever had severe symptoms of stomach upset following a dinner party at a restaurant? Did you rush to the phone to check on one or more of the guests to find out if they, too, were ill?

The conversation usually goes like this:

"I'm so sick! What did you order, the shrimp or the leg of lamb? I think I've got ptomaine poisoning."

The term "ptomaine poisoning" is incorrectly applied to food poisoning.

It was once thought that ptomaines, the substances found in putrified food, were the offending agents in food poisoning. Our newer medical knowledge reveals that it is not the ptomaines, but the toxins of the staphylococcus bacteria that usually cause food poisoning.

Greatest Preventative

The proper refrigeration of food is the greatest preventative against food poisoning. When refrigeration is not available, fresh foods should be used for each meal.

One word of caution:

In warm weather, especially, desserts that contain custard and salads made with mayonnaise dressing deteriorate rapidly and can cause serious gastric upsets. It is wise to remember to keep these particular foods in the refrigerator until just before serving.

Most restaurants are aware of this potential danger, but if you suspect that these foods have not been adequately refrigerated, it is best to avoid them.

The tolerance for spoiled food varies with the individual. One person may get food poisoning from something that does not affect another person.

Housewives often ponder over the problem of whether a particular food is spoiled or contaminated. The safe rule is to discard that food if there is any doubt at all.

HAZARDS OF GLASS DOORS

Modern architecture tends to substitute glass for the traditional wooden doors in stores and office buildings.

Admittedly, it is very attractive. Yet this decorative innovation has brought with it an additional safety hazard. Severe injuries to the face, the hands and legs are being reported from the records of hospitals all over the country.

To look their loveliest, glass doors are constantly polished and cleaned. This very transparency makes them almost invisible. Unsuspecting children and adults just "walk through" them, breaking the glass and causing severe lacerations and bruises.

Many Injured

In homes, too, picture windows that extend to the floor and plate glass walls have injured many guests who were not aware that a glass partition separated them from the lovely garden beyond.

For children at play these glass windows and doors are a "top priority" hazard. A protective barrier of furniture against a plate glass picture window adds safety to beauty.

Glass doors and this type of window are particularly dangerous at night, because of the many confusing reflections.

Preventive Measures

Fortunately, something is being done about this problem. Throughout the country, owners of public buildings and stores, recognizing the potential danger of these glass installations, are devising many techniques to make sure that their patrons know that a door is a door and not "thin air."

Conspicuous bands of color at eye level, large insignias or boldly-lettered firm names are some of the methods used for interrupting the all-over transparency of the heavy plate glass.

And many city ordinances now are insisting that this glass be laminated and unbreakable.

Dear Abby

Spirited Censure!

DEAR ABBY: Could you please tell me why so few Americans hang up flags on special holidays? On our street there was only one flag out on Memorial Day—ours. We are English born and America is our new home. We love it, but can't understand this about the American people. They praise America, sing the anthem, but when it comes to paying $2.40 for a flag, they hesitate. It beats me. In England, a flag flies from every house, large and small. It was the same on my daughter's street here in America. One flag—theirs. It makes me so mad I could scream.

CANOGA PARK

DEAR CANOGO: The colorful tradition of showing the flag seems to be fading in America. And it's regrettable, for my taste. But REAL patriotism doesn't have to be demonstrated. Some of the most confused un-Americans are frantic flag-waivers. We have our Colonel Blimps ,too.

DEAR ABBY: I was under the impression that my husband was working seven days a week, night and day, for five months. One afternoon a young woman came to my apartment and told me that my husband has practically been living with her all that time. She said she loved him and wanted me to give him up. When my husband came home and saw her there he almost jumped out of the window. He told her in front of me that it was all over between them. She said she'd never let him go. He practically had to throw her out. I never felt so sorry for a woman in all my life. My husband has tried to make it up to me in every way possible. He is begging me to forgive and forget. Should I let him share our bedroom again?

BROKEN-HEARTED

DEAR BROKEN-HEARTED: Yes.

DEAR ABBY: I am a very small eater and we eat out a lot. It is very embarrassing to me when a waitress notices that I haven't eaten much and asks, "Was there something wrong with the food?"

I tell her there was nothing wrong with the food and she gives me an argument, and says, "Are you SURE there's nothing wrong with it? You hardly touched it." Abby, I'm not a child, and I don't need to be coaxed into eating more than I want. How can I get waitresses to stop calling attention to the fact that I don't eat much?

SMALL EATER

DEAR SMALL: Don't blame the waitress for inquiring as to the quality of the food she serves you. She's only trying to be certain that you are satisfied. Next time you order, tell the waitress you are a small eater and prefer small portions.

CONFIDENTIAL TO MR. S: If you want to make your teenager feel grown up, give him his own telephone bill.

What's on your mind? For a personal reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, Box 3365, Beverly Hills, Calif.

Mulch Piles Seen As Non-Oderous

By Jeff Cox
Daily Record Reporter

STROUDSBURG — Ivan T. Eckler of 1122 W. Main St., Stroudsburg, is engaged in a neighborhood feud over his mulch piles.

Hellmuth Lind of 1128 W. Main St., has complained to the Stroudsburg Borough Council that the Eckler compost piles are odiferous and a breeding ground for rats.

Eckler says the piles are nothing more than leaves and humus and corn shucks, and only one pile has some peelings from potatoes and apples and vegetables. These turn into rich humus, Eckler says.

Eckler was the first to bring a charge. He said Lind burned refuse after hours and that the burning odor was unpleasant.

Piles Inspected Sunday

The Daily Record inspected the piles Sunday. Here is the box score:

There are five piles. One has leaves, the second has pine needles, the third is humus which has been there for two years, the fourth is corn stuble, the last is a leaf pile with some apple peelings and vegetable peelings in it.

Upon visual inspection, none have any discernable odor. All are enclosed by fences and one is covered. All are merely organic material and none contain garbage.

Organic Gardening

Eckler believes in organic gardening, and reads Organic Gardening and Farming magazines. He also said, "I followed instructions for making these piles—instructions printed in the Green Thumb column of the Daily Record."

"If there are any rats, they live under nearby sheds and buildings," Eckler contended.

On his garden property, Eckler uses the mulch to feed and raise corn, gladiolus, tomatoes, gourds, and jerusalem artichokes. "Rodale, the editor of Organic Gardening, recommends jerusalem artichokes," Eckler said.

Borough Ordinance

Samuel Van Gordon, Stroudsburg borough health officer, said that "we consider the mulch piles a nuisance. He (Eckler) admitted putting garbage in the piles, so they'll have to be removed."

The borough has an ordinance—436—which covers mulch piles with vegetable matter in them. It states in part:

"Garbage is the animal or vegetable wastes resulting from the handling, preparation, cooking, and consumption of foods." This means apple peelings and potato peelings, according to the definition in the ordinance.

With this definition, the ordinance says: "No person shall place any garbage . . . upon any private property within the borough, unless same is placed in a proper receptacle for collecting or an express approval is granted by the borough."

Eckler's mulch piles containing the apple peelings are not in proper containers according to the ordinance. It will be up to the Board of Health to decide the issue.

Denies Burning

Mrs. Helmut Lind of 1128 West Main St., whose husband filed a complaint against Eckler, yesterday answered charges by Eckler that the Linds were burning garbage. Eckler had said the only bad odor in the neighborhood came from their garbage, not his mulch piles.

"I do not burn any garbage at any hour," Mrs. Lind said. Eckler had said the Linds also burned garbage "after hours."

"We take our garbage to the dump," she said.

Mrs. Lind also charged that there are "50 not 15 rats breeding from his debris. He has a room-ful of leaves collected from every house when he mows lawns.

Beauty On Wheels For Hospitalized

New London, Conn. (AP) — What can you send a hospitalized friend or relative who already has so many flowers, is on a restricted diet and, doesn't care much for reading?

The problem has been solved at Lawrence Memorial Hospital here. Gift certificates for the "Glamor Wagon" can be obtained for both men and women, whether bedridden or up and about.

The newly instituted roving beauty salon is summoned by a doctor or nurse at the request of a patient, for services ranging from hair coloring, permanent waves and manicures for the women to scalp treatments and shampoos for the men.

Naturally, young mothers in the maternity ward are avid fans of the beauty salon. They feel that when Daddy comes for a peek at his newest tax deduction that Mommy should look her best.

Before the beauty program was allowed to get under way at Lawrence Memorial, the two operators were given an orientation course in hospital ethics, routines and special care for bedridden patients.

Now Mrs. Alida J. Aligood of Waterford — who is in charge of the facility — and her assistant, Mrs. Barbara Bidell of Niantic, can give beauty care to people who have had eye ailments, cardiac conditions or are in traction.

"We can give a shampoo without lifting the head of a patient."

Not only does the program provide more attractive patients but it also is hailed by hospital physicians as a possibility in more rapidly effecting the cure of some patients.

"After all, a person who looks better generally feels better," said one.

Patient reaction is favorable among all ages. One elderly woman being wheeled past the salon peered inside, then looked up at the nurse and asked, "How can I get in there?"

THE WYCKOFF SHOPPER

When I was a greenhorn reporter for The Daily Record years ago, and she was Bushkill correspondent, Ida Michaels and I had numerous telephone conversations. We recalled these last Sunday when we met at the Open Air Art Show in Port Jervis where she was assisting her brother, Ernest Cron, in the sale of his paintings. Petite and friendly, with well coiffed gray hair and shining brown eyes, Mrs. Michaels was admiring the art work stretching up and down Main Street on either side, and we both lamented our own lack of talent. "I have to be content expressing myself in crocheting," she explained. "I enjoy doing it, but I could never paint a picture."

This I doubt. Just this morning I arrived at my desk to find a package containing a pair of the most attractive potholders I have ever seen. They are Mrs. Michaels' work; white with a green border and a center medallion of luscious purple grapes and pretty leaves. Far too choice to become involved in kitchen work, these potholders can be hung on the wall . . . and that's how I plan to use them. Now I wonder who told Mrs. Michaels that above all other designs I admire the grape motif? That woman is not only kind, generaus, and gifted—she's PSYCHIC!

William Wells, our fashion merchandising manager, has issued an invitation to all models who participated in our recent Wyckoff-Hadassah Show at Tamiment to be guests in our Tea Room Wednesday evening when Albert Koster will show a half hour or so of the colored slides taken at that time. I haven't seen them, but Estelle tells me they are excellent. The invitation also includes Wyckoff employees who were working the night of the show and were unable to attend. We would like an advance indication of numbers, however, as some type of light refreshment is planned.

Incidentally, this will be the first "party" here over which our new Tea Room manager will preside. Taking the position vacated several months ago by Hazel Henning is Blanche Mackey, formerly of our Frigidaire Department. Blannie loves to eat well, fully as much as she loves to talk. She's an excellent cook, a splendid organizer, and a perfect hostess. What else could such a job call for? But why didn't some one think of this before?????

Word has it that Harold Albert also leaves Frigidaire to become our indoor maintenance supervisor, and that Bob Igler will step over from the Men's Shop to work with Larry Boscaino, in Appliances. Oh, there are changes at Wyckoff's! "Shorty" Widmer is back in our Advertising Department for a few days too, while Marlene Andrews vacations . . . After seeing Peggy Cass in "She Didn't Say Yes" at Pocono Playhouse I am increasingly convinced that she could pass as Helen Diamond's sister. Helen, our Cosmetics buyer, is more willowy and her voice is softer, but I must say she can grimace just as humorously as Peggy any day of the week . . . Cora Albertson tells me we have just received the Summer's LAST SHIPMENT of Faithful Frocks in sleeveless styles. Pretty cottons, the selection includes both prints and floral stripes, sizes 14½ to 24½ and 12 to 20, priced at a lowly 3.98.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCIS DRAKE

Tuesday, July 9, 1963

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — Be reconciled to brethren, estranged associates. Extremes produce aggravations, anxieties, surely not wanted. But extra praise and enthusiasm boost higher even the best morale.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) — Favorable Venus promotes normal and extraordinary attainment, and especially artistic and intellectual education. Fine for finishing touches, strategem, dexterity.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) — Some switching around, wavering tendencies. Project your agility and stay with the trying tasks with all the practicality you can muster (should be distinguished coming from you).

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — Growing stronger benefic aspects command your ingenuity, skill and finesse to take the reins. Know the full meaning of rewards expected, and do not go beyond the reasonable.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo) — Some of today may be "up in the air," much of it will turn out as you direct. Useful hobbies of the past may assist rewards to your abilities now. Keep everything authentic.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — Do not overthrow a workable device or method for something new unless the new has definite improvement qualities. Improvise, to protect; your tact can forget others' errors.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — Certain changes taking place faster than many realize. Be in on the advancements . . . there are many. Teachers, research, testing, backing progress generally gain fresh awards.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Yours among the few outstandingly favorable planets today. Press for sound objectives; focus on targets cautiously. Warm up, take aim deliberatively. Ask encompassing questions.

November 23 to December 21 (Sagittarius) — "Beauty is as beauty does," we see it every day. The heart, mind, and soul speak first, and win or lose objectives on their own merit. Mix today's recipe prudently.

December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn)—Observe all types of influences; don't rush into rearrangements, rewards. Uninvestigated investments. Permit extra kindly indulgences for children, oldsters, the unfortunate.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) — Middle-week "settling down" effect could become a dragging of the feet if you are not mindful. This day's aspects are stronger for you to make progress than for many — take the hint.

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) —Increasingly potent for training, known and thoroughly studied matters, for a new-type attempt at an old project or chore. Be not be deluded by false fronts or behavior.

YOU BORN TODAY: Right in the middle of the deep-thinking, affectionate, protective, tenacious Cancer. A Zodiacal Sign of some rare abilities, and so much charm that sometimes you gain access and turn decisions without yourself knowing how others came to accept your judgement. Mind not to overwhelm with persistence, for though you mean sincerely to keep things harmonious and orderly, you may step beyond your permissive limits without realizing it. Many opportunities ahead for your HEALTHY imagination, free from anxieties. Your mind sees possibilities some people miss, so take the wheel, and go forward in the small AND big ways you find open, and which YOU open up for yourself. Don't be conservative to being penny wise and pound foolish. Our equals to make whether of talents or other resources. Help keep domestic environment cheerful, let little errors go unnoticed; praise often, it begets better endeavor from all. Control your sensitiveness; develop artistic inclinations, next few months require them. Birthdate of: Elias Howe, inventor sewing machine; Dorothy Thompson, journalist; Henry Hallam, historian.

HERE is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

College Mat Clinic Opens

By KEN O'BRIEN
Daily Record Sports Editor

EAST STROUDSBURG — More than 100 high school and college youths representing three states and the District of Columbia yesterday began the first day of special instruction in the first annual Pocono Wrestling Clinic at East Stroudsburg State College.

Directed by Clyde (Red) Witman, ESSC head wrestling coach, the staff includes collegiate coaches Jimmy Miller of Cornell and Ed Perry of the U. S. Naval Academy.

Scholastic coaches on the staff include John Johnston of Stevens Trade School, Russ Riegel of Hunterdon Central, Thad Turner of Phillipsburg, N. J., Chris Pofi of Neshaminy, and Al Zarbatany of Wilson Boro.

"These men," said Witman, "have not only been fine wrestlers, but have produced fine teams as well. They know how to impart their knowledge to others."

The clinic is PIAA-approved and is run according to PIAA and NCAA regulations. The staff will be emphasizing individual instruction during the week's activities.

Local high school representatives include Larry Pope, John Armato, Bob White and Frank Coco of Stroud Union; Bob Nagman and Ricky Leaman of East Stroudsburg, and Tom Grainger of Pocono Mountain.

"We're teaching basic fundamentals of holds and techniques," Witman explained, "in the way the sport is presently leaning."

'Present Trend'

"Our wrestling style is currently leaning toward international wrestling, but at the same time international wrestling is leaning more and more toward our style. We're keeping up with the present trend at this clinic."

Much of the emphasis at this clinic is being placed on the pin, or fall. Reason for this, according to Witman, is that next year colleges will be wrestling under the new one-second pin instead of the two-second requirement.

"Strength is another factor we're stressing," Witman added. "Coaches today are trying to develop real horse power in their wrestlers because they have come to realize the successful wrestler must possess a combination of strength and finesse."

Since this is the first wrestling clinic at ESSC, it was originally conceived to maintain it strictly on a local basis. But the idea proved more popular to a much wider area than originally anticipated. Thus, Witman already has inaugurated plans for a larger session next year.

"Elevate Wrestling"

"We're attempting to elevate wrestling in our area," Witman declared, "and that is the primary purpose of this clinic — to develop better wrestlers and thus develop more interest in the sport at the same time."

Among the basic fundamentals being taught by the instructors are takedowns, counter-takedowns, cross leverage, position and movement on mat, rolls, standups, sit-outs, counter-rolls, counters for overhooks, pinning combinations and use of cradles and breaks.

There also are periodic sessions for offensive and defensive drills.

Final session of the clinic will be held Friday at 2 p.m.

Eagles, VFW And Exchange Win Babe Ruth League Tilts

STROUDSBURG Eagles 1106 uncorked a fierce 14-hit attack to demolish Line Material, 25-5, while VFW trimmed Crowe, 9-7, and Exchange Club whipped IBW, 6-3, in Monroe County Babe Ruth League contests yesterday.

The Eagles, who couldn't do anything wrong, scored in every inning, taking a quick 7-0 lead in the first round and pouring across nine tallies in the fourth to score the rout.

VFW scored five times in the second inning and led Crowe's all the way but had to stave off a seventh inning rally by the losers who pushed over four markers before the side was retired.

The Exchange Club was forced into extra innings to gain their 6-3 verdict over IBW. In fact, the winners came from behind in the top of the regulation seventh inning to score two runs which knotted the count at 3-all and then tallied three in the top of the eighth for the victory.

Major League Attendance Is Slumping

NEW YORK (AP) — Twelve teams, including the pace setting Los Angeles Dodgers and the New York Yankees, show declines in major league attendance at the midway point of the 1963 baseball season.

An Associated Press survey disclosed Monday that seven National League teams and five American League teams are running behind last year's figures at the gate.

Crowds in the National League have decreased 156,638 while the American League boosts a gain of 20,180. Overall, the major leagues show a turnstile deficit of 136,158.

Big league action has attracted 10,801,753 so far this season as compared with 10,930,911 for as many dates a year ago. The National League has drawn 5,719,194 in comparison to 5,875,832 in 1962. In the American League, the current figure is 5,085,559 compared with 5,055,079 at the same time last season.

Clear, Cool Weather Forecast

O'Toole, Bunning All-Star Starters

By JOE REICHLER

CLEVELAND (AP)—Left-hander Jim O'Toole of the Cincinnati Reds and either right-handers Jim Bunning of Detroit or Ken McBride of the Los Angeles Angels will be the starting pitchers in Tuesday's 34th All-Star game at Municipal Stadium.

With advance sale below expectations, a crowd of around 45,000 was expected for this nationally televised (NBC) game beginning at noon (EST). The forecast was for sunny and cool with temperatures in the mid-70's.

Manager Alvin Dark of the National League squad named O'Toole without reservation, but American League pilot Ralph Houk, still undecided between Bunning and McBride, said he would wait until three hours before game time before making a decision.

Prefers Bunning

"I haven't had a chance to speak to any of my pitchers," Houk said Monday. "I prefer to start Bunning because of his past record in All-Star competition and his ability to get out right-handed hitters.

"However, he pitched nine innings Sunday and his arm may be tired. If he tells me he's ready, he's my man. If not, it will be McBride."

Bunning went all the way Sunday in pitching his sixth victory against nine defeats for the Tigers. He has been especially effective in All-Star competition. In the past two years he has permitted only one hit and no runs in eight innings against the National League.

McBride, who hails from Cleveland and is on the squad for the third straight year, has seen no previous All-Star action. He has a 9-6 won and lost record with the Angels. He last pitched Saturday.

This will be O'Toole's first All-Star outing. The 26-year-old star of the Reds' pitching staff, idle since Thursday, has a 13-6 record and a brilliant earned run average of 2.01 in league competition.

Third In Cleveland

This marks the third All-Star game in Cleveland since the classic's inception in 1933. The American League holds a 17-15-1 edge although the National League has won five of the last eight with one ending in a tie. The teams split in 1962.

The American League won here in 1954, 11-9 and also in 1935, 4-1, before the record crowd of 69,831.

The batting orders announced by the rival managers for the lone All-Star contest this year produced no startling revelations. San Francisco's Willie Mays, as expected, was in the cleanup spot for the National League while the American League honor went to Boston's Frank Malzone.

Dark's line-up had Tommy Davis of the Dodgers leading off, followed by Dick Groat and Bill White of the Cardinals, Mays, Henry Aaron (Braves), Ken Boyer (Cards), Ed Bailey (Giants), Julian Javier (Cards) and O'Toole.

Nellie Fox, veteran Chicago White Sox second baseman, will lead off for the American League forces. He will be followed by Albie Pearson (Angels), Al Kaline (Tigers), Malzone, Leon Wagner (Angels), Earl Battey (Twins), Joe Pepitone (Yankees), Zoilo Versalles (Twins) and Bunning or McBride.

Different Plans

Houk, at an informal press conference, reiterated he intended to use as many players as possible, in contrast to Dark's plan to play his starters as long as possible.

"I don't see how we can be hurt no matter which players I use," Houk said. "I am satisfied we have the strongest possible squad that we could assemble, considering the unavailability of Mickey Mantle."

"I'm going to make quite a few changes," Houk added. "I think I owe it to the fans to play every player on the team. Naturally, I intend to keep a few players back in case of an emergency."

Dark was en route from San Francisco and didn't attend the news conference with Houk.

O'Toole, unless knocked out of the box, will hurl three innings, the maximum permitted of any pitcher. He is expected to be followed by one of the four left-handers on the NL squad, Sandy Koufax, Warren Spahn, or Hal Woodeshick. The right-handers are Juan Marichal, Don Drysdale, Larry Jackson and Ray Culp.

Houk said if Bunning is the starter, he will pitch only two innings because of his route-going performance Sunday. The Yankee skipper indicated the Tiger right-hander would be followed by McBride, Jim Bouton of the Yankees, with Dick Radatz, Boston's superb right-handed relief ace, pitching at the windup.

Finley Asks Permission To Move A's

CLEVELAND (AP) — Charles O. Finley, president of the Kansas City Athletics, suggested to the American League Monday that he move his franchise to Oakland, Calif., The Associated Press learned.

Finley and Joe Cronin, American League president both denied that a formal request was made.

Authoritative sources told The Associated Press, however, that Finley had suggested the move at a meeting of the American League, being held before Tuesday's All-Star Game.

"I am a sphinx," Cleveland General Manager Gabe Paul said when questioned about the report.

Honesty, Integrity Prevail

Amish Baseball Is Different, And Umpires Are Delighted

By MARVIN E. MILLER
Lancaster New Era Writer

LANCASTER, Pa. (AP) — Lancaster County has a baseball rarity—a team composed entirely of brothers.

There is little likelihood that the general public will ever get to see them play, however.

They're all Amish.

The Fisher Boys, as they call themselves, fielded a starting lineup of brothers ranging in age from 12 to 23 the other night.

Not only that, they also had two substitutes on the bench.

The team of brothers reflects the increasing popularity of baseball among Amish youth and is rare, even among the Amish, who traditionally have large families.

Traditions Prevail

Other traditions of the Amish have also pervaded the manner in which they play baseball. The Amish are taught to avoid con*troversy with their fellow man;* to live in peace with him. And a man should be as good as his word.

Their efforts to do so are shown in the way they play the game and it would warm the heart of many an umpire.

The other night the Fisher Boys were trailing 2-0 when pitcher Johnny Fisher rounded third and headed for home.

The play at the plate was close. Catcher Abner Petersheim reached out to make the tag when Fisher slid in and the ump, hovering over the play, didn't signal safe or out.

Instead he asked the catcher, "Did you tag him, Abner?"

"No," said the catcher.

"Yes, well, then he's safe," said the umpire.

Everyone accepted the decision without a dissenting voice.

Later in the game opposing pitcher Amos Lapp threw one close to another batter.

"Did it hit you?" asked the ump.

"Yes," said the batter.

"Take your base."

He's "Sorry"

Amos Lapp said he was "sorry."

And when shoeless Levi Lapp in left misjudged a fly ball with two on, nobody criticized him, either.

"Too bad, Lappy," said a consoling teammate.

Lappy adjusted the suspenders holding up his baggy, gray work pants, shook his head sadly and silently, determined to get the next one.

Baseball has become the favorite game of Amish youth, replacing the game of cornerball. Cornerball is a version of dodge ball played with a ball, or in its more earthy version, a burlap bag twisted into tight knots.

In adapting to baseball, which many Amish learn during their elementary school playground days, they have reduced certain elements of the game to its simplest terms.

Nobody questions the umpire. If he isn't certain what has happened, he asks the players, who are truthful, even if the decision goes against them.

They play hardball, but neither catcher nor umpire has any protection behind the plate other than a mask. One fellow even catches barefoot.

Fine Attitude

Their attitude toward the game would gladden the heart of any coach or manager. The Amish don't have to be told to hustle because they don't know how to loaf.

Infielders charge at ground balls full tilt. If they don't get a glove on it, they knock it down Pepper Martin style, with their chest, and arm, or other part of the body.

Games move faster than conventional baseball, too. The Amish aren't up there for a base on balls, they're swinging the bat if the ball is within reaching distance.

Amish baseball is picturesque and intensely played. It is also somewhat clandestine because some parents don't approve of such carryings on.

Others do. They say the boys could be doing something worse than playing ball. The youths themselves play with obvious enjoyment and have organized a league which this year had an "All-Star" game.

Scheduled playing dates are spread weekly by the word of mouth system and a team has yet to forfeit a game because players didn't show up.

"Pick-Up" Game

The Fisher Boys played against another team identified as the All-Amish. It wasn't a league game, "just pick up," as one of the boys put it.

The all-brother team lost, 4-3, in 11 innings and it is possible that pitcher Johnny Fisher weakened somewhat in the 11th. At least that's what he acknowledged.

It appeared that a brother at second base was playing out of position and a hit to deep second that should have been an easy put out allowed the winning run to score.

But there was no criticism of the play or the player.

If Fisher did weaken a little, it was understandable. He had put in a full day's work on the family farm in 90-degree heat before taking the mound. He struck out 13.

Amos Lapp also went the distance. He struck out 12.

The big attraction, however, was the All-Star game. It got around by word of mouth and about 150 persons, all Amish youth, showed up for it.

Come By Buggy

Players arrived by horse-drawn buggy or converged upon the diamond from across the fields. Many carried alfalfa grain bags, the Amish answer to the utility or gym bag.

They were dressed in their conventional garb when they arrived, black trousers, and broad-brimmed hats. Inside the alfalfa bags were gloves, an old pair of trousers, baseball hats, t-shirts, and shoes.

Those who didn't have equipment other than a glove played in gray, farm work trousers, several of them barefooted.

Umpires were recruited from among the spectators. They maintained the dignity of the umpiring profession by calling the game dressed in their black garb.

Umps Alternate

There was an umpire behind the plate and one for each base. When one of the umps wearied of the job, another would take his place from the crowd.

Players showed a good understanding of the game.

"Atta baby Emanuel Stoltzfus," said a teammate.

The infield had lots of chatter. "C'mon Beiler babe," said the shortstop. "That Dutchman can't hit," said the second baseman.

EAST STROUDSBURG — R. C. Cramer banged across six runs in the first inning yesterday to take the measure of East Stroudsburg National Bank in an E-burg Little League battle, 9-7.

The bankers had narrowed the 6-0 lead to a 6-4 spread in the third when they tallied three markers after scoring one in the first themselves. But Cramer put the game out of reach in the fifth with a three-run spurt and then held on when ESNB rallied for three runs in the sixth.

Labadie poled a home run for the winners.

Miss Smith Trims Billie Jean Moffitt

By ROBERT JONES

WIMBLEDON, England (AP)—Margaret Smith, a 5-foot-10 Aussie lass who lifts weights in her boudoir, demolished Billie Jean Moffitt of Long Beach, Calif., Monday in the rain-delayed women's singles final of the Wimbledon Tennis Tournament, 6-3, 6-4.

Miss Smith was the first Australian girl ever to win Wimbledon, and her victory wrecked American hopes for the first sweep of the titles since 1955.

Chuck McKinley, the acrobatic 22-year-old from St. Louis and San Antonio, Tex., took the men's singles Friday in straight sets from Fred Stolle of Australia.

The United States had a share in one other championship. Darlene Hard of Long Beach, Calif., playing in what she says is her last Wimbledon, teamed with Maria Bueno of Brazil for a victory in women's doubles over Miss Smith and Robyn Ebborn of Australia, 8-6, 9-7.

Bid Thwarted

The triumph thwarted Miss Smith's bid for a women's triple slam—singles, doubles and mixed doubles — last achieved by Doris Hart in 1951.

Miss Smith and Australia's Ken Fletcher won the mixed doubles, beating Miss Hard and Bob Hewitt of Australia, 11-9, 6-4.

Mexico captured its first full Wimbledon championship when Rafael Osuna and Antonio Palafox overwhelmed Jean-Claude Barclay and Pierre Darmon of France, 4-6, 6-2, 6-2, 6-2. The French hadn't been in a Wimbledon final since the days of Rene LaCoste, Jean Borotra and Henri Cochet back in the 1930s. Osuna shared the 1960 men's doubles crown with Dennis Ralston of Bakersfield, Calif.

Billie Jean's bid fell short, she said, because she didn't feel nervous enough.

"I tried to get keyed up for the match," the bespectacled little chatterbox—she talks to herself all through a match — said, "but I just couldn't feel any nerves at all. And my game never got going."

Miss Smith is a husky girl who carries weights round the tennis circuit and exercises with them in her hotel room to build up her strength.

Powerful Drives

Top-seeded for the tournament, she quickly established her superiority, rushing the net behind a crunching serve and hitting powerful drives from the backcourt when Miss Moffitt — four inches shorter—was serving.

The victory avenged Miss Smith's defeat by Billie Jean in the first match last year, when the Australian girl was also top-seeded. Billie Jean was unseeded both years.

This year, Miss Moffitt also played a giant-killing role, knocking off three seeded players on her way to the finals.

But Monday she could not get her volleys working with precision and her passing shots were far off the mark.

The postponement Saturday seemed to take most of the excitement out of the match, and the center court crowd of about 12,000, some three-fourths of capacity, looked on in silence.

At the end, there was polite applause, and again when Princess Marina, Queen Elizabeth's aunt, presented the trophies. The Princess had a long talk and a joke with Billie Jean after the American girl had curtsied when she received her silver runner-up medal.

Miss Moffitt served three double faults in her very first game and won it only after a long struggle. The break came in the fifth game when Margaret hit some man-sized forehands that Billy Jean couldn't handle.

TWINS, BUT NOT IDENTICAL

We can't even tell them apart by looking. But there is one vital difference. The all new Mercedes-Benz 190 sedan on top is powered by a gasoline engine. Below, the 190 D sedan powered by a diesel engine.

Both are the last word in luxury with exceptional economy and very low maintenance. You have a choice of gasoline power or the unrivalled economy of a diesel engine.

Bill Deihls' Tire Store Changes Stores Policy To New Discount System

Bill Deihl's Tire Store, at 13-15 South 7th St., Stroudsburg, has adapted a new discount policy effective immediately. Owner, Bill Deihl, stated, "The new policy means virtually every product in the store will be reduced to prices comparable to big city discount houses."

This includes all auto accessories, tires, batteries and merchandise in the automotive line, camera equipment, bicycles, tools, wheel goods, appliances, sporting goods, lawn & garden supplies & furniture, and many other items in the store.

The new system, a National trend, has been effect in larger cities for the past few years. Bill Deihl's is the first store in its line in Stroudsburg to undertake this substantial reduction of price move.

It means that residents of the Poconos may now purchase items locally for far less off on some items without any reduction of quality. Periodic newspaper and other advertisements will carry specials, even further reducing those items found advantageous to reduce at the time.

The new system has been undertaken to enable local shoppers to receive the bargains they hear about in the larger metropolitan cities. Through the use of this policy, it is hoped, local buyers will be able to purchase more for even less by saving the cost of travel to other larger shopping centers out of town where previously the only discount centers existed.

Be ready for a fall and winter season of holiday entertaining in a new home by planning your housing needs now. Our staff with years of experience and proven ability will be happy to assist you. See our planned community of lovely homes at Norton Farms (opposite entrance to Glenbrook Country Club). Other lots also available. For more information, call

The Daily Investor

Power Propaganda

By William A. Doyle

Q. I am disturbed by all the propaganda being spread around by so-called public power organizations. Those socialists are financed by the Federal government. I am very unhappy about this because I own stock in some investor-owned public utility companies. These investments are intended to provide me with retirement income and also to help put my grandson through college.

I was really shocked to see an advertisement in a national magazine claiming that "America's Rural Electric Systems" are following Daniel Boone's footsteps. Who pays for this propaganda?

A. You do. I do. And so does every other taxpayer in these United States. It's as sample as that.

The so-called public power people are living high these days, thanks to their patsies in government. Socialistic power systems (and that's a much more honest description) are springing up and expanding like crazy.

And, frankly the whole thing is just that—crazy.

A socialistic power organization (whether it be a Tennessee Valley Authority or a "rural electric system" or a "municipally-owned system" or anything else of that ilk) can only survive because it lives on the taxpayers' dollars.

If any of those outfits had to go out and raise money (for construction, improvements, etc.) without government subsidies, taxes, as investor-owned companies must, the buccaneers who are getting fat running and promoting them would drop dead.

I am well aware that this column is certain to bring in a deluge of organized letter-writing campaign from public power people and their patsies. For them, I have the following reply.

Get your nose out of the public trough and try earning your living.

Q. I am 72. My wife is 65. For years we have accumulated Pacific Power & Light Co. common stock. We don't want to worry unnecessarily but we are concerned about the published stories that Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udal is trying to "build an empire and strangle private industry" by spending billions of taxpayers' dollars on power lines and similar projects.

We fear that the government may take over Pacific Power & Light. Is there any danger of this?

A. Real easy. Any danger of that (in the immediate future or even in your lifetime) seems more than remote—just about impossible.

There's no getting around the fact that Udall has been pushing socialistic power projects—to the detriment of investor-owned utility companies and at the cost of all the nation's taxpayers.

You should realize that Udall is a member of President Kennedy's Cabinet. What Udall does reflects the policies of the New Frontier.

Where electric utility companies are concerned, these policies are far out—in left field.

But, from the mailbag, it's easy to spot the growing resentment of those Udall-Kennedy policies. That's a hopeful sign. There are millions of utility company stockholders in this country. It is about time that politicians began to show some concern for those stockholders and voters.

(Mr. Doyle will answer only representative letters of general interest in his column. He cannot answer phone queries.)

SAFE!

The Daily Newspaper Is the Safer, Surer Advertising Investment

Two questions influence the choice of an advertising medium. First, what does it cost to reach a person with a sales message? Second, how many of those you reach will buy? A typical advertiser can reach a person through newspapers at least as economically as through other media. And the newspaper delivers an audience that likes to read advertising, prefers newspapers with advertising, and shops from advertising. Such an audience guarantees more sales action per message delivered, and makes newspapers the safer, surer ad medium. Why not send the daily newspaper to bat for you?
